

JUST INSTINCT.

Fate was a cat, and Leonard Herriek was a mouse. There had been some rare sport, but Herriek was of the opinion that it could not last much longer. He had run this way and that way, and a thousand times he had fancied that he was going to escape. But always the velvet paws, with the long, sharp claws springing out of them, had caught him just in time. So at last he lay still, panting, not knowing which way to turn.

He was in a big city, all alone. The people who rushed by him were like the thoughts that whirled through his brain—they were shadows, and the everlasting train of them had no beginning or end. He could not distinguish the real men and women whom he saw from those whom he merely remembered. Now and again there appeared in the throng the faces of the dead. He did not mind those. But there were others that he shrank from.

He stood with his back against the iron fence in front of Trinity church. Herriek's hands were in his pockets. He crumpled a crumpling piece of paper, which meant that he could live several days longer if he cared to do so. As to a more extended future, he could not picture it. All the lines of his life seemed to end in a knot which could by no means be untied, but must merely be dropped. He remembered that there were miracles, but he could not think of one to wish for.

He crossed Broadway and walked down Wall street, slowly and with hesitation, for he had no errand. A voice cried, "Cab, sir!" almost in his ear. He turned and looked up at the man on the box.

"Is it possible," he said to himself, "that I still look like a gentleman?" He felt toward the cabman as toward one who had given him a helping hand. Why not pay the debt? To do so would cost him only a day of his life. He had a $5 bill in his pocket.

"Yes," he said. "Take me up to the Fifth Avenue hotel."

It was the first place that had come into his mind. He got into the cab and snatched the door. The cushioned seat and the comfortable support for his head were very refreshing. A fancy came to him that he would dine decently and then go to a theater. The extravagance would be trifling, for it was really of small importance whether he starved to death on Sunday or the following Wednesday. He was in a mood to make a jest of it all.

A strong glare from an electric light struck down into the carriage and made visible to him a package in brown paper that looked as if it might be a sandwich. The object protruded from under the seat. He thought it must be the cabman's supper which had been hidden in some small locker, and had fallen upon the floor. The idea that the food should be spoiled was disagreeable to Herriek, and so he picked up the little brown bundle.

It was smaller than he had supposed, and it did not feel like bread. But had it been food and he at the last pang of starvation the touch of it would not have sent such a thrill through all his frame.

He knew that the contents of that package were money. It felt like a mass of bills folded, awkwardly wrapped up and fastened with elastic bands. Through the brown covering Herriek could feel the crispness of the government paper. The amount might be a poor man's monthly wages or a rich man's profit on a great transaction.

As to his own conduct in this matter, Herriek had no doubt whatever. Fate had thrown this money into his hands, and fate might take it away, but not if he could hold on tightly enough. His fingers trembled as he picked at the elastic bands. Suddenly and without his knowing why the rubber strings vanished with a loud snap that startled him, and the package sprang open on his knees. He caught a flash of green color, and then the cab rolled out of sight into shadow.

It seemed a long time before another light struck in upon him. At the moment when it did so he saw a face close to the cab door, and he dodged back, covering the bills with his hands. But the chance passenger on the street saw nothing. He was thinking of his own affairs no doubt and had no inkling of the strange thing that passed so close to his eyes.

Herriek was himself again in a moment, and he bent forward, eagerly scanning the bills in his hands and counting them feverishly. There were 40 of them and each was of the denomination of $1,000.

Throughout the later period of the young man's misfortunes he had had substantially but one wish—to rest. Rest has many forms, suited to a vast variety of individual tastes. To Herriek in his day dreams it had always taken the form of travel without care. All paths lie open for a man who has $40,000, and there is no reason why care should sit behind him as he rides.

Herriek had only the most shadowy thought for the person who had lost this money. He did not even speculate upon the manner of its loss. It had passed into the control of one who needed it, and that was enough.

He disposed the notes in his pockets in the best interests of comfort and safety. Then he folded up the brown paper and pocketed that also, with a dim consciousness that if it were left in the cab it might get the driver into trouble. The fellow was honest, no doubt, and Herriek did not wish that he should suffer a wrong. He preferred to keep the wrapper himself and take the risk of it until he could find some means of disposing of it that would be safer than throwing it out of the cab window.

How to leave the cab was a question which concerned him nearly. He did not wish to confront the driver again, for there might be an investigation, and a question of identification might arise, in which case it would be well to have the man know as little as possible of Herriek's personal appearance. He reflected with satisfaction that the spot on Wall street where he had entered the carriage had been rather dark.

The cab stopped suddenly, its path being blocked by a tangle of vehicles. Herriek sat still, his hand upon the catch of the door. It yielded noiselessly; the door swung open.

Herriek stepped out. Turning back for an instant, he perceived the cabman sitting upon his box in entire unconsciousness of the fraud that was being practiced upon him. He was a poor man and doubtless worked hard for all the money that he received. Still, it was reckless to attract his attention again, especially so after having left the cab in that strange manner.

There was a way to the sidewalk through the press of vehicles. Herriek saw it from the corner of his eye and was about to take advantage of it. Instead, to his surprise, he found himself turned toward the cabman, and immediately he heard his own voice saying: "I have decided to get out here. How much do I owe you?"

The cabman named his price, and Herriek paid him with the $5 bill which had been the sum of his wealth and the end of it, so far as he could see, so short a time before. He counted his change carefully, remembering that he would probably have to wait until the next day before he could break one of the thousands. Enough remained to him from the bill for a supper, a bed and a breakfast.

When he had found a restaurant, he ordered a meal and ate it with relish. It was an enchanted food. It was the fare on an Atlantic liner, the delicacies of European hotels and the fruits of the tropics.

He cared little for his bed. It would be no more than a place to lie and think of the future. It was many a night since he had really slept. Certainly with so much upon his mind he would not sleep this night, even if he should try. So when he had been shown to his room in a hotel he piled his pillows against the headboard of the bed and reclined against them, fully dressed. He was very happy. No question of right or wrong in what he had done or what he expected to do came to torment him.

For a long time he had borne his life like a tremendous burden. This had suddenly slipped from his shoulders, leaving his natural powers benumbed. In the midst of his first vision of a new life he was aroused by a knocking at the door. He started up; his legs would hardly support him; he had no voice with which to ask who was there. But one explanation was possible. He must have been watched by the police.

He tottered to the door and gave utterance to a hoarse, inarticulate sound. "Eight o'clock, sir!" cried a voice without. "You asked to be called, sir."

He rushed to the window and flung open the shutters. Day streamed in, strong and beautiful. The gas flame faded. He knew that he had slept as he had not slept before in years. In the mysterious depths of his life he felt a new strength stirring, but it was only nascent as yet.

A bath and a breakfast revived him still more. He felt the exhilaration of a busy day upon which he was entering. He scanned the papers, but so far as he could see there had been no news of the money that had been lost. He was not conscious of any excitement in searching for that news. The fear of detection had quite left him. Of all stolen goods, money is the hardest to recover.

Presently he found himself riding down town in an elevated railroad train. He was going to a steamship office to arrange for his journey, then to a banker's for a traveler's checkbook. His pockets were bulging with money, but there was something in one of them that he couldn't remember to have put there. He pulled it out and found it to be the brown paper wrapper that had contained the money. As he held it in his hand it was concealed by his newspaper. No fellow passenger could see it, and it was doubly fortunate, because in plain sight upon the paper were the name and address, "Herbert L. Graham; 40 Wall street."

The train was just stopping at Rector street. That was the station nearest the steamship office. Throwing the brown paper back in his pocket, he left the car and went with the throng down to the street. He was thinking about the accommodations he would choose on the steamer. He continued to think of that and kindred subjects, yet he turned north on Broadway instead of south. Presently he found himself asking an elevator boy in a big building if he knew where Mr. Graham's office was.

Mr. Graham happened to be in his outer office when Herriek entered. He was pouring a story into the ear of another gray haired Wall street man, and Herriek heard a few words of it—something about cabs and cash and carelessness.

"I have found the money that you lost," said Herriek. "Here it is." "Zion!" cried the banker, clutching the bills in his fingers. "My dear fellow, tell me all about it."

"There's nothing to tell," replied the young man. "I merely found it in the cab."

Mr. Graham eyed him a moment in surprise. "You take it coolly," he said. "I couldn't take it at all," responded Herriek, with a feeble smile. "I don't know why. It was instinct, I suppose. My ancestors must have been honest men."

"Upon my word, you must take one of these notes," said the banker. "I've offered it in an ad. and—"

"I can't do it," said Herriek. "I don't feel it to be right."

"But, my dear boy," exclaimed the old man kindly, "I must do something for you. I want to believe me! At least come back and take lunch with me. Shall we say 1 o'clock?"

"It will give me great pleasure," said Herriek, and, bowing, he turned away and walked out of the office—Everett Hollbrook in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Chas. Allen Young, the sign painter, has put up a nice gilt lettered sign for Thomas Smiley, on Main street. He has also painted and sent to Joseph Smiley a similar sign, to be used by him at Augusta.

The regular drills of Company D, N. G. S. M., will be held hereafter the first and third Monday evenings of each month. The Company will have the use of the hall for drill purposes on these evenings.

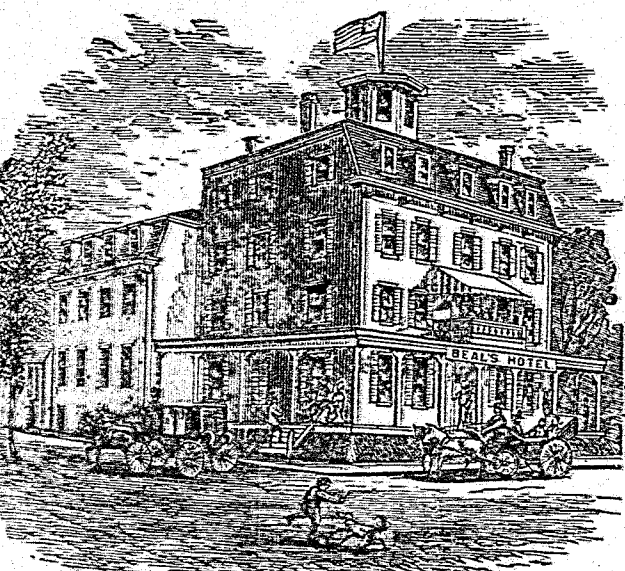

The ladies work hard to make a few dollars during the Fair. Several societies run eating rooms. Much of the food is given; also the labor of serving it. Thus a large proportion of the money received goes into the fund for some good cause as not gain.

Mrs. A. J. Newers and daughter Etta are home from Portland where they have been several weeks for the treatment of Etta's eyes. They are to return, next week. Etta's eyes are much improved, and it is hoped her sight may be restored in a great measure if not fully.

This is the great farmers' festival, and it is one of the events of the year for the people of Oxford County. Every one is invited to attend and have a good time. There is plenty of room, and a day out of doors with the Oxford Bears will make everything seem pleasant and do you a vast amount of good.

People watched the sky all day, Monday, but that did not prevent its raining, more or less. At noon the sun shone out for about five minutes and many thought the weather "had settled." It made a good day to get things ready to "take to the fair." About one of the meanest things is a rainy Fair week.

THROWN FROM THEIR WAGON.

Part of the stone walk crossing Main street opposite the Beal's House was taken up Friday and filled in with sand. It was supposed to be left all right for travel, but Saturday night a German peddler named Braun and a man riding with him, while driving across, were thrown out and more or less shaken up. The bad place in the street was immediately fenced up. Monday, it was fixed. The stone in the crossing was to be "dressed" and returned, and the party doing it was to have it done before this week but somehow failed to do it.

H. A. Record is building a dam across his brook, near his house, so he can get ice for his creamery easily.

A New York friend sent Wm. Brown, an aged citizen, a large package of tobacco to cheer life, in memory of former times.

The sudden change of weather brought a heavy frost on the Flat. Corn was greatly damaged. There was no frost except on the very low land.

Mrs. Fred Hutchinson closed her summer residence, last Thursday, and with her little son, drove through to her home in Portland. Her family went a short time before.

Those boys who ran away, Sept. 5th, have not been heard from by the public, as yet. N. P. Merrill does not intend to follow his boy, again. Apparently, the company was too large for safety to their morals.

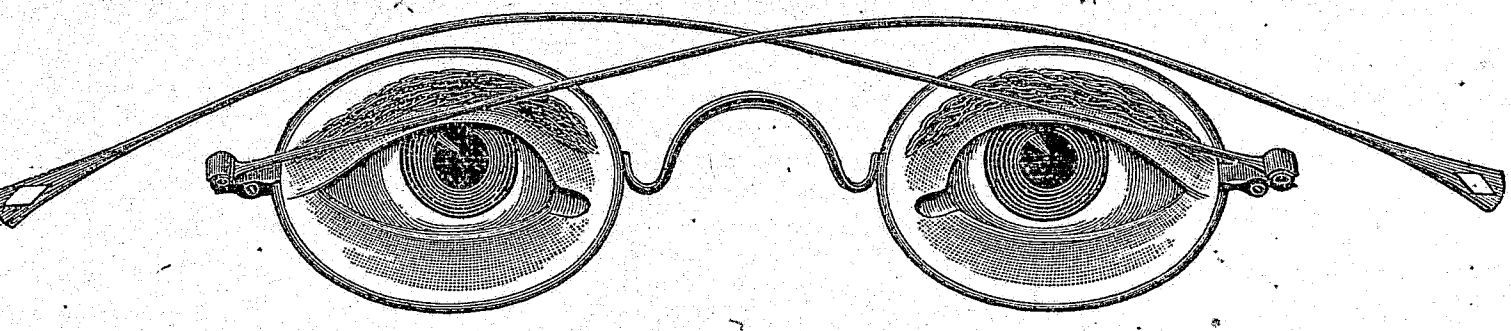

Frank S. Sawyer and Fred Tuttle are guests in this place. Fred is now working in the Boston & New England R. R. depot, although young, being always faithful, cheerful and industrious. He always has plenty of employment. A few years ago he was a small boy and neighborhood pet. Sawyer will return to his work in Lynn, shortly.

The post-office and store of Arthur Dow was broken into, Sunday night, the 5th inst., and $15 or $20 worth of goods stolen. The same day or night, an unoccupied house belonging to W. S. Bucknam was considerably demolished, and a new road cart stolen from the barn. The depredations are supposed to be the work of three young men, who are said to have disappeared.

OXFORD CENTRAL ELEC. RY.

The mortgage has been executed and put on record in the several towns through which the road runs. The mortgage runs to the American Loan & Trust Co., Trustee, of Boston.

Fair weather, Tuesday morning. As in a Fair, everything depends on fair weather, every one was thankful.

HARBOR.

Walter Benson is working in the corn shop at Lovell.

E. W. Stanley and wife spent Sunday with his brother here.

The parsonage will soon be done and is a very cozy little home.

Mrs. Mason and little daughter have been at F. A. Farrington's.

Chas. Evans and wife from Sweden visited his uncle here, the past week.

Warren Johnson has arrived to take his wife and children to their home in Haverhill.

Mrs. H. W. Evans, Mrs. L. P. Evans and Master Ora left here, Friday, for their home in Dover.

School begins on Fish street, Monday, Miss Haley, teacher. Byron McKen is engaged to teach the Harbor school.

Several from here went on the cranberry bog after cranberries, and brought home a good supply in spite of the heat.

Elwood Bemis is to run a new corn binder, this fall. Several of the farmers have engaged him to bind their corn fodder.

Dr. Orlando Charles called on friends here, the past week. He and his wife are visiting at his father's, Simeon Charles, at North Fryeburg.

J. A. Johnson will close his house for a time and he and his daughter Carrie will make their home with Mrs. Brackett, while Lida goes to school at Fryeburg Academy.

The farmers are hustling their sweet corn. The new sealing machine at the shop at North Fryeburg makes the sealers' faces look long, and the labeling machine makes the girls' faces look long and the farmers are wondering if a machine can be invented to grow the corn, if so, they wonder if they can rent their land to corn companies.

WEST BUCKFIELD.

Scott Briggs has bought Mrs. R. J. Warren's heifer.

Ethel Bradbury entertained some twenty of her friends, Tuesday.

Dan Emery and Everett Robbins were at Mrs. Bonney's, Wednesday.

Everett Robbins and family visited at Mrs. Emma Bonney's, Monday.

C. B. Harlow and family went to Lewiston, Thursday. Mrs. Harlow has gone to Clinton to visit her parents.

Charles Love has swapped horses with Fred Hodgdon. Gus Mayhew has swapped horses with Frank Keen.

EAST OXFORD.

Chester Witham is at work in the corn shop.

Lester Johnson was at home from Mechanic Falls, Sunday.

George D. Peterson of Kent's Hill is visiting at Wm. F. Caldwell's.

C. H. Flood bought two cows of Henry Records of South Paris, last week.

School commenced in district No. 6, Monday, Sept. 12, with Mabelle Mont as teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark and daughter, who have been visiting Mrs. C's sister, Mrs. Carrie Bray, the past week, returned to their home in Massachusetts, last Friday.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

It is well to know that if salt fish is washed quickly the fish is freshened much more if soaked in milk, milk that is turned being as good for the purpose as fresh milk.

If icing runs off a cake and will not stick, flour should be sifted over the cake and then wiped off with a soft cloth before applying the icing.

Small, quality shaped gilt baskets filled with sweet peas and with the handles of the baskets decorated with dainty bows of ribbon matching the blossoms in color were the favors at a recent dinner.

When purchasing a pineapple, select one with its green, spiky leaves in perfect condition. Cut this top from the fruit and plant it in a pot of earth. It will grow and be a desirable plant, looking well among other green plants in the winter season.

If the tea steeper contains any cold tea and soaked leaves, no matter how small an amount, do not throw the mixture away, but pour it every few days into the hot glass water bottles. Shake the bottles well and then thoroughly rinse them in clear water. Treated in this manner, the inside of the bottles will remain bright and clear.

Lukewarm water is far better for removing beer stains on glass than either hot or cold water. After washing, the glasses should be stood to drain for a moment and then dried on one clean towel and polished on another.

NORTH BUCKFIELD.

Harry Heald, M. D., is again in town. Charlie Reed was in our place, last Sabbath.

Mr. Wheeler and wife are staying at Etzel Smith's.

B. S. Record is at work in the corn shop at Buckfield.

Dan Fletcher from West Peru is in the place for a while.

Maggie Heald is taking music lessons of Mrs. H. Irish at Buckfield.

Mrs. J. E. Mayhew visited her sister, Mrs. Arabella Farrar, the 10th.

Mrs. Abbie Farrar was at Gus Spaulding's and passed the day, the 11th.

Mrs. R. J. Bicknell has been visiting at the lower village, for a few days.

Elysa Heald's school begun, last Monday. She boards at Fred Bennett's.

J. F. Bicknell and Jim. Bicknell were at Byron, a few days the past week.

Lida Spaulding of Sumner visited Mrs. Celia Dunham, part of the past week.

Mirt Warren is at work at Rumford Falls for Fred Atwood, a couple of weeks.

Gus Pearson's horse kicked him on his knee, last Saturday night, hurting him quite bad.

Rosecoe Metcalf of Portland came on his wheel and has been visiting at Chandler and Ed. Damon's.

Our school begun, the 13th, Effie Newell of Hartford teacher. She boards with Mrs. Celia Dunham.

Willard Mason and wife and Mrs. Susan Morse have been to Poland to visit Mrs. Mason's sister, Mrs. Fannie Pitts.

Mrs. Reuben Farror made her first call on foot, one day lately, by sitting down three times. She went a quarter of a mile, to Gideon Fletcher's, which she had not done before for seven years.

Special officer Orrin M. Godwin of Brockton, Mass., is soon to visit his many relatives in Oxford county. Officer Godwin is a native of Waterford and still takes a lively interest in the hill country of Maine. He will make his longest stop in this vicinity with his mother and sister at Rumford Falls.

Waterford-born Cyclist.

The Speedy Young Cambello, Mass., Wheelman Who is Making His Mark.

Abbott L. Godwin, by his career on the road in bicycle races, this season, has won the admiration of all wheelmen and those interested in bicycling generally. From an ordinary "kid" bumping around on a $10 wheel, he has sprung into such prominence as to be chased by many as the fastest unpaired road rider in the city, and all this in less than two months.

"Jib," as he is familiarly known, is a son of Special Officer O. M. Godwin and resides at 3 Northfield street, Campello, Mass. He first saw the light of day in Waterford, Oxford County, Apr. 23, '80.

For several years he has been a resident of Campello and is a member of the racing team of the Campello Bicycle Club.

This season Godwin purchased a racing wheel and found that he could easily "shake" the "boys" on any road journey when he desired. He seemed to be possessed of every qualification for a racing man, and when the first road race was run at the "Nip," Godwin was prompted by his friends to enter. He did so, and, from the 2-minute mark was eighth man to finish. His work elated his friends, and they urged him to train and get in condition for the numerous road events.

At first he hesitated somewhat about adopting this course, but his friends finally prevailed upon him and he decided to enter the next event, the Burke-Chase race. From the 45-second mark in the race he won first prize.

The next event in which he participated was the Pilgrim Park road race, starting from the 30-minute mark, and he finished in fourth position.

Godwin's fourth race was at the "Nip," when he rode in the C. B. C. blue suit on the same Mark as Frank German, his team mate. The two worked together beautifully, riding one of the prettiest races ever seen, and Godwin crossed the tape a winner of first place and first time prize with German just at his side.

Godwin and German started together on the 40-second mark at the Heights, Aug. 28, in Dubois' 10-mile race, twice around the Shoe City Wheelmen's course. They again worked the "Nip" trick and timed in Godwin first and German second, with their respective time prizes dangling at their belts.

The following Saturday Godwin went to Exeter, N. H., and from the 40-second mark, in a field of 100 riders, rode a beautiful race. He passed over 100 men and finished in 16th position. He was credited with third time prize, but as a matter of fact won first time, as it was conclusively proven that the alleged winners of first and second time out the course.

Last Monday he rode at Franklin in a field of 125 riders. He had a handicap of 15 seconds, and Campello men at the race who held stop watches declare Godwin won first time prize. The official score of this race, however, has not been given out.

In the Tuxbury road race at Whitman, last Saturday, Godwin and German, with Senter, Snell and E. I. Lord rode from scratch. Godwin won second time prize and 10th position, while German won first time.

The position Godwin has on his wheel and his easy movement while riding, without the slightest side surging of his body is commented on everywhere he rides. Godwin is employed at the G. E. Kahn Co. shoe factory, and has to do his training evenings.

His success in the coming fall meets is looked for by his friends. [Brookton Times.]

DENMARK.

Summer boarders are returning to their city homes.

Minnie C. Smith is teaching school at Eaton Centre, N. H.

Grace A. Smith goes to Worcester, the 24th, where she has a position as stenographer and type-writer.

Lillian E. Smith, who has been visiting her parents, has returned to Lovell, where she has a fine position.

Corn shop opened, Wednesday, but worked only half days as corn is very backward and not more than half full crop.

C. M. McIntire sold a nice trotting horse, the 10th. He was driven from Springvale, Thursday, and Friday, was found dead in the stable.

EAST BROWNFIELD.

worse and died Saturday morning. He was about 30 years of age.

Mr. Newell of Charleston, a photographer, has been spending the past two weeks at Clinton Warren's.

The school children in the Quint District saw a bear, one day the past week, near the spring where they went for water.

Ed Hartford was attacked with appendicitis, Sept. 6, and although he had some of the best physicians that could be procured, he continued to grow worse.

The people of East Brownfield were quite shocked, Thursday morning, to hear of the sudden death of Geo. Bradbury. He had been in poor health for the past few years, but was able to call on neighbors and ride out till within a few days of his death. He died alone with his sister, who has kindly cared for him for the past year, while they were out to summon assistance. His age was 76 years.
